

Children – Parenting Orders Versus Parenting Plans

Parenting Orders	Parenting Plans
What is a Parenting Order? A Parenting Order is a set of orders made by a Court about parenting arrangements for a child. A Court can make a Parenting Order based on an agreement between the parties (Consent Order) or after a Court hearing or trial. A Parenting Order may deal with whom a child is to live, the time a child is to spend with each parent, any aspect of the care, welfare or development of the child, or any other aspect of parental responsibility.	What is a Parenting Plan? A Parenting Plan is a written agreement entered into voluntarily by the parents of the child and is signed and dated, and covers issues such as with whom a child is to live, the time a child is to spend with each parent, any aspect of the care, welfare or development of the child, or any other aspect of parental responsibility.
Is a Parenting Order enforceable? Yes, a Parenting Order is enforceable.	Is a Parenting Plan enforceable? No, a Parenting Plan is not enforceable.

What happens if the other parent contravenes a Parenting Order?

If a party contravenes a Parenting Order you can apply to the Court for contravention proceedings and the Court may impose a penalty on the party who contravenes the order if there was no reasonable excuse for the contravention. Depending on the situation, the type, and the seriousness of the contravention, a Court may vary the primary order, compensate for the time lost with the child, order the person who contravened the Orders to attend a post separation parenting program, pay the legal costs of the other party, participate in community service, pay a fine, or the Court may impose a sentence of imprisonment.

What happens if the other parent contravenes a Parenting Plan?

As a Parenting Plan is not enforceable and is not an Order of the Court, the only remedy available if a party contravenes a Parenting Plan is to either engage in family dispute resolution with the other party to discuss the contravention or commence Court proceedings to obtain a Parenting Order.

If you apply to the Court, the Court must have regard to the terms of the most recent Parenting Plan when making a Parenting Order.

Who makes a Parenting Order?

A Parenting Order is made by a Court, usually the Federal Circuit Court or Family Court of Australia.

Who makes a Parenting Plan?

A Parenting Plan is not registered or filed in any Court and is entered into by the parents of a child. However, other persons, such as grandparents or step parents can be included in a Parenting Plan.

Who prepares the terms of a Parenting Order? The terms of a Parenting Order are prepared by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) The Court in the event there is no agreement by the parties and the matter proceeds to a hearing or trial; or</li> <li>b) By either party's lawyers in the event the parties can agree to the terms of the Parenting Order (Consent Orders).</li> </ul>	Who prepares a Parenting Plan? A Parenting Plan is usually drafted by a counsellor, mediator, or family dispute resolution practitioner (who may not be a lawyer or have any legal training). A Parenting Plan can also be drafted by a lawyer. Parents can also prepare their own Parenting Plan.
How do I vary a Parenting Order? A Parenting Order can be varied by consent by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) Filing in Court for variation of Parenting Orders; or</li> <li>b) Entering into a Parenting Plan</li> </ul> Parenting Orders are subject to later Parenting Plans (unless that Parenting Plan has been made under threat, duress, or coercion, and unless there is provision in the Parenting Order that it cannot be varied by a Parenting Plan). Therefore, your Parenting Order will no longer be of effect when you enter into a subsequent Parenting Plan. If there is no consent, the only way to change a Parenting Order is to apply to the Court to change the Parenting Order. A Court will only change the Parenting Order if you can show that there has been a material change in circumstances since the last Parenting Order was made.	How do I vary a Parenting Plan? A Parenting Plan can be varied by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) Consent of both parents by entering into a subsequent written Parenting Plan; or</li> <li>b) By applying to the Court for a Parenting Order which can be made by the consent of both parties (Consent Order), or after a hearing or trial if there is no consent.</li> </ul> If you apply to the Court for a Parenting Order when you already have a Parenting Plan, the Court must have regard to the terms of the most recent Parenting Plan if doing so would be in the child's best interests.

What will it cost me to get a Parenting Order?

The cost of your Parenting Order will depend on whether you and the other party can agree on the terms of the Parenting Order by consent (Consent Orders) or whether your matter proceeds to a contested hearing or trial.

What will it cost me to get a Parenting Plan?

Parenting Plans are usually cheaper to draft than a Parenting Order as they are usually drafted at dispute resolution by the counsellor, mediator, or family dispute practitioner. The cost is usually incorporated in the cost of the counselling, mediation, or family dispute resolution.

You can also draft a Parenting Plan yourself.

Disclaimer: © 2015 Hartley Healy

This information sheet does not give legal advice. Information sheets are produced by Hartley Healy Lawyers; they provide general information only on relevant topics of interest in relation to Family Law current at the time it is produced. No reliance should be placed on such general information as contained on www.hhfamilylaw.com.au and in the information sheets. Legal advice should be sought about the particular circumstances of your particular case.